

Dr. Israel Flamenbaum

Dr. Flamenbaum is a world renowned agriculturist, bringing over four decades of expertise to the field of dairy cattle – specializing in strategic planning of dairy projects in warm climates, with emphasis on the relief of heat stress. After a prolific career lecturing all over the globe and publishing numerous papers, he retired from the State of Israel's Ministry of Agriculture in 2008- where he held the position of Director of the Division of Animal Husbandry. He is now a full time private consultant (fluent in both English and Spanish) and travels extensively to assist government institutions, dairy cooperatives and private dairy farms all over the world.
